Welcome to Pioneer Park!

COMPETITION FIELD LAUNCHES INTO ACTION

The newest addition to Malone's campus is the competition field of the Pioneer Park complex. Completed in early August, the facility is the game and practice field for the men's and women's soccer teams, and will serve as "home" for the recently launched lacrosse program. In addition, the field is a community resource, serving as a site for intramurals, club sports, and recreation for Malone faculty, staff, and students.

"Our vision was to create an asset that will forever transform the experience for Malone students," said Malone President David King. "The facility, when coupled with installation of the baseball field, phase two of the project, will help to drive enrollment and retention while also generating economic development opportunities in the Canton region. We are so pleased with the way it has been so favorably received."

As expected, Malone students have been excited about the complex and the opportunities it provides.

"The competition field has transformed the way we host home soccer games and has created an event atmosphere attracting more faculty, staff, and students to watch our student-athletes compete," said Tanya Hockman '94, director of athletics. "It is a community gathering place now, and we're seeing new faces on campus for our competitions."

Hockman has already seen increased interest from external organizations who are eager to use the field for tournaments, camps, and clinics.

"We are prioritizing the Malone community when making decisions about using the field at this time," said Hockman, "but we're already hearing from regional partners who are interested in using the field for events to bring people into the area. We are excited about the revenue-generation opportunities that the competition field will make possible."

The total cost of the Pioneer Park competition field is $1.6 million and was made possible by funding from the Hoover Foundation, Bill and Pearl Lemmon, Premier Bank, and Malone alumni and friends. Construction partners on the project included Forever Lawn, Vasco, Hilscher-Clark Electrical Contractors and Engineering, and the Furbay Electric Supply Company.

"We are blessed with wonderfully generous donors and extraordinary relationships with vendors who all contributed resources, time, and effort to make the field a reality," said King. "Malone Trustee Matt Sutter, chief executive officer of SoL Harris/Day Architecture, was instrumental in the completion of the project. The genesis of the vision and design of Pioneer Park was provided by our partners at Derck & Edson. There are many heroes with this project."

Fundraising is ongoing for the installation of a synthetic turf baseball field that will bring intercollegiate baseball back to the Malone campus, adding additional revenue-generating potential and campus energy.

"We're very encouraged by our conversations on the baseball complex project and look forward to making progress with it," said King.

A MESSAGE FROM

THE BOARD OF TRUSTEES

TO THE MALONE UNIVERSITY COMMUNITY

s we celebrate the accomplishments and service of President David King over the next 10 months, we also look forward to the hiring of Malone University's 14th president. To that end, we have established a search committee comprised of faculty, staff, students, and trustees to lead the community's engagement in this important hire by the Board of Trustees.

A search profile has been created for use with our efforts to advertise in national publications to encourage application by qualified candidates. Members of our internal constituent groups recently engaged in conversations to identify the most important character qualities and technical leadership skills expected in top candidates. Those characteristics include: strong Christian faith, honesty and high integrity, servant leader, visionary leader, able to lead through change, academics and higher education experience, business acumen, and fundraising abilities.

Expressions of interest are being submitted and will be reviewed by the search committee. We intend to be in a position to identify top candidates at the October board meeting. Our initial timeline has a goal of being able to announce the selection of Dr. King's successor by the February board meeting.

I will keep you informed as we make progress. Thank you for your continuing interest in Malone and all that you do to make this an attractive position for extraordinary Christian leaders.

Sincerely,

Rod Neuenschwander,
Chair, Board of Trustees

New Academic Offerings at Malone

NEW MAJORS AND MINORS RESPOND TO CHANGING NEEDS OF WORKFORCE

As employer needs evolve and market demands shift, Malone continues to respond to the desires of graduates and employers alike. "We are proactively choosing to add new programs which will help students be equipped for service to the ever-changing needs of the workforce in a post-COVID-19 world," said Greg Miller, provost.

APPLIED PSYCHOLOGY

Applied Psychology prepares students to work with individuals who struggle with chemical dependency and addiction by giving them a tangible and practical view of psychology while emphasizing care for those directly impacted by the societal epidemic. Graduates will be eligible to take the exam that leads to the Chemical Dependency Counseling Assistant Certificate.

CHEMICAL DEPENDENCY COUNSELING

The chemical dependency counseling program provides an opportunity to gain essential knowledge regarding substance abuse symptoms and counseling treatment strategies. The program is aligned with the educational requirements for the CDC Assistant, Phase 1, certification in the state of Ohio.

HUMAN SERVICES

Human Services prepares students to serve the most vulnerable in society by applying principles of social work to the tangible, hands-on work of strengthening communities. Coursework will be person-centered in its approach, and students will be able to experience work before graduation through exposure to the court system or social service organizations like community outreach centers.

PROFESSIONAL WRITING AND EDITING

Professional Writing and Editing trains students to use their creative gifts to become writers in professional settings. This program leverages the humanities-based study of English for the workplace environment through a concentration in digital arts, marketing, communication, or creative writing. Internship and off-campus experiential learning opportunities are plentiful.

SPANISH FOR SERVICE & THE PROFESSIONS

Spanish for Service & the Professions is a 15-hour minor that is paired with any professional or helping program. It emphasizes an innovative approach to Spanish language education that promotes workplace readiness. Students will develop linguistic skills of intermediate, high, or advanced low according to the scale of the American Council on Teaching Foreign Languages guidelines for Oral Proficiency Levels in the Workplace (www.actfl.org).

“We are proactively choosing to add new programs which will help students be equipped for service to the ever-changing needs of the workforce in a post-COVID-19 world.”

HOSPITALITY & TOURISM

Hospitality & Tourism prepares students for roles in the world's largest service industry, including careers in hotels, restaurants, cruise lines, theme parks, travel agencies, resorts, and visitors bureaus. Graduates will benefit from a broad-based foundation in industry fundamentals, and our Northeast Ohio location will provide experiential learning opportunities with our many regional partners (including 300 hours of paid internships).

URBAN STUDIES

Urban Studies prepares students for roles in community and economic development, community organizing, urban ministry, non-profit organization management, and service to city government. The program draws upon a wide range of disciplines including history, sociology, social work, political science, and business. Additional elements will include hands-on learning opportunities in the City of Canton with a focus on justice, civic responsibility, peace, and reconciliation.

President David and Winnie King

MU: 10 years ago you were attracted to the opportunity to serve as president at Malone. What was the primary attraction and has that aspect of Malone continued during your time here?

DK: I can recall early in the process of exploring Malone - even before the interviews — when I first came across Malone's Foundational Principles. The document was immediately very compelling to me; it felt like a gravitational pull. I continue to believe deeply in what that document expresses and how it expresses our aspiration for living out Malone's mission. It's probably not an overstatement to say that I still look at these statements nearly every week around an issue or question I want to discern or express. The Foundational Principles have not only been sustained in their importance to me, but have actually deepened for me since I first encountered them.

MU: It's obvious, to even the most casual observer, that you are a team. How have you made that work? What has it added to your experience here in serving Malone?

DK: There are two things that come quickly to my mind, both of which are more significant than what I would have imagined 10 years ago. One is the love we share for our students. We've never tired of that, of thinking about, talking about, and being with our students, celebrating who they are. We both share a deep love for Malone students. Secondly, we share a love for telling the Malone story. That's one of the privileges of being in the roles that we're in and I think we've discovered a shared love of doing so.

WK: I think the fact that we both work to our strengths, and that we have different strengths, has made us a stronger team even though we're very different as people. And I agree with David that the most important thing to us is our love for Malone students. So when things get hard, they're our focus. They are who we keep in mind as we push forward.

MU: Winnie, in addition to your service to Malone, you also have an interior design business. How have you made that work? You've also donated your time and talents to complete several design projects to enhance student spaces. Talk about those experiences.

WK: I have enjoyed some really fun pro bono design projects at Malone, mostly in our student-oriented spaces. While I've enjoyed all of these projects, because they were for students, the one project that I really enjoyed is in the Barn — Emma's Cafe. I worked with the Student Senate president at the time; in essence, he was my client and we did a lot of research with students to explore what they wanted. Then I had the fun of designing the space, and I always think to myself, "what is the space going to be like in 10 years?" I want it to have longevity in design, in quality of the pieces, and with green, sustainable resources. Seeing students enjoy the space, and students interacting with faculty at poetry readings or open mic nights, has been very rewarding.

MU: The last 10 years has been one of the most challenging periods in higher education. What was it like to face those challenges as president of Malone?

DK: I have a deep sense of calling with regard to serving Malone. It was clear to me from the outset, crystal clear when we came with no doubt, that this is where we were meant to be. That calling has sustained me. Over the course of the past 10 years, I have reflected on that sense of purpose and calling, the reasons why we are here. It's about being a steward of an incredibly powerful and compelling mission and the way that mission is worked out by our faculty and staff in the life of every student. I revisit that frequently as a way to sustain myself in the work. I've discovered that I have a reservoir of internal resolve to deal with the issues we've faced as an institution. We've been able to look beyond the moment and not be overwhelmed. Far more than before in my adult life, I have embraced the importance of discipline and sustaining what I call 'the early quiet hour' in my own personal devotion. That has become an important hour of my day, and has become a key component of sustaining my calling and exhibiting resolve.

MU: How do you want to be remembered?

WK: I would like to be remembered as somebody who was a cheerleader for Malone students, a supporter who was always available, and someone who was thrilled with the accomplishments of our students. I want to be remembered as a good contributor for David and an encourager for faculty and staff.

DK: I would like to be remembered as someone who was always student-focused. It's the students first, that is why we're here. What also comes to my mind is a little more at altitude. I hope that in the future they look back and see our stewardship of the University as a 10-year piece of Malone's history that strengthened the University's trajectory. I hope that this presidency will be seen as living out the mission in particular ways in this season of time. So, I want people to be able to look back and reflect on the last 10 years as really important to sustaining Malone's mission.

MU: Describe a memory of your time serving Malone that you will never forget.

DK: About four years ago, I walked out of the Johnson Center to head up the sidewalk to a meeting. As I began my walk, a student was also coming out of the Johnson Center, going to the library. It was a student I had not met. We walked together and talked the entire length of the sidewalk from the Johnson Center up the hill. She was from Africa and came to Malone to study creative writing. We talked about what her plans were, her hopes, dreams, and her aspirations. When we got to the top of the hill, we needed to go in different directions. My comment to her was that I was sorry the sidewalk was so short. We didn't have sufficient time together. That's how I feel about all of our students. We have so little time with them and they add so much to our lives. I'll always remember that walk as a metaphor for our time with all of our students.

WK: One of my best memories was a dinner we hosted for students around Thanksgiving. Students from so many different backgrounds joined us, and we ate and sat around the table listening to each other's stories, how they came to Malone, what they wanted to do in the future. It was a great reminder that we are a family and we learn so much from each other.

MU: There is a search underway for Malone's next president. Why do you think it will be an attractive position for candidates?

DK: Malone has an absolutely compelling mission, but more than a mission. Malone is a community of incredible people who are committed to that mission. Additionally, society and the church are in desperate need of the outcomes that we produce. I think it is a wonderful opportunity because Malone's character is so compelling.

WK: It's a blessing to serve. And if one is called to this position, the opportunities to serve and make a difference are tremendous. The relationships among all the different constituent groups are very rewarding. It's an opportunity for servant leadership.

MU: Dr. King, you have made it clear that you will finish your service strong by working hard until the very last day. Think ahead and share what you hope to accomplish on your last day, June 30, 2022.

DK: I've had extraordinary mentors who taught me that you work until the last hour of the last day, and that is exactly what I intend to do. There is much work to be done. I will spend much of my time in fundraising, with a focus on securing the gifts necessary to finish the baseball field phase of Pioneer Park. Additionally, it is my intent to play an appropriate role in the presidential search, as this hire is as important to me as it is any other member of the Malone community. The Board is very interested in establishing an aggressive, ongoing strategic planning process that I am committed to help shape with the campus community. Lastly, on June 30, 2022, I would hope to have a long walk on that sidewalk with one of our students.

WELCOME

Jerry and Sue Campbell

JERRY CAMPBELL Class of 1964

When JERRY CAMPBELL '64 left Augusta, Ohio, to head to Malone College in 1959, thoughts of dairy farming were far from his mind. The business administration major wasn't sure what the future held, but he trusted that his life's work was in God's hands.

demonstrated unselfish service to students as their own mission field," he said.

After graduating from Malone, Campbell went to the Naval Officers School in Newport, RI. As a U.S. Navy officer, he was assigned to the destroyer class of ships and spent a tour in Vietnam in 1967. By God's grace, he returned home safely and pursued a career in the field of business.

"My professional experiences taught me how to sell a product, sell a service, and manage a sales team in district and regional offices for three different national corporations," he said. "I knew that the same business principles could be applied to any business, and I started to feel the Lord leading me toward business ownership."

The business education and godly training that Campbell received from Malone guided him as an employee and as an employer. He also knew there was still much to learn in business and in life.

"My first marriage failed because I acted on my own impulse and not on the Lord's leading," he said. "However, during my corporate business years, God, in His grace, sent me Sue through a blind date that was arranged by a sales prospect. I never got any business orders from that prospect, but on September 2, 1978, I got a wife!"

"Looking back over my life now, I can clearly see the hand of God," he said. "I graduated from a small high school, with only 14 students in my class, so I was accustomed to small classes and a friendly, supportive atmosphere. Malone's class sizes and Christian environment eased my transition into college life in the city."

Campbell came to salvation in Christ at the age of 12, so when it was time to select a college, he knew that a Christian institution would equip him for the career God had chosen for him.

"Malone faculty and staff were loving, encouraging, knew me personally, and

Over the years, their family grew up to include four children, eight grandchildren, and so far, one great-grandchild.

Campbell's journey into farming began in 1982 when Sue's father approached them about purchasing a dairy farm from him. After the hectic pace of life in Washington, D.C., including harsher winters, the Campbells welcomed the challenges that would come with dairy farming in Florida, and their herd grew from 250 cows to around 1,000 at its peak.

"Through a series of 'miraculous coincidences and events,' the Lord sent us knowledgeable people with hearts and minds to guide us," he said. "God's faithfulness was shown to us by prospering that business, so we stepped forward in faith toward another new adventure — the development of a community cemetery and a funeral home — to serve the grieving families that He sent our way."

Russell Haven of Rest in Green Cove Springs, Fla., was established in 1999 adjacent to the dairy farm as a catalyst to serve local families in search of hope. In 2013, the Campbells began downsizing the farm and the herd was sold off by 2017. They eventually sold the farm land in 2020.

Their daughter, Anna, now manages the cemetery and funeral home.

Officially retired from the day-to-day business operations, the Campbells now serve Christ in new ways, including the creation of the JERRY CAMPBELL ENDOWED SCHOLARSHIP at Malone.

"After three years of balancing a full college load and a full-time job, I was physically and mentally exhausted. I chose to take a fifth year to finish my education, which actually enabled me to add economics courses to my business degree," he said.

"I was blessed to graduate debt free, which I know is not possible for many of today's students. A financial scholarship would have been an enormous help to me, and it's now a privilege to bring God glory through the giving of scholarships. There is synergistic value in a Christian education that enhances every aspect of life. We want to help bless the families of future Malone students in the ways that the Lord has blessed us."

Every good gift and every perfect gift is from above, and cometh down from the Father of lights, with whom is no variableness, neither shadow of turning. — James 1:17 KJV

SOCIAL WORK GRADUATES PASS LSW EXAM AT 100%

In 2020, 100 percent of the social work graduates who took the social work licensure exam passed! This is well above the national pass rate average of 68 percent. Malone social work graduates work in a variety of fields, including care for older adults, child and family welfare services, in hospital settings, supporting those with disabilities, providing treatment for individuals struggling with substance abuse and mental illness, service in the Peace Corps or as missionaries, and some have launched their own non-profit organizations.

"The social work program is a source of inspiration among Malone's academic programs," said Greg Miller, provost. "It consistently produces professional, caring, and analytical social workers who impact the fabric of our community in tangible ways."

FILM STUDENTS PLACE 3RD IN INTERNATIONAL FILM COMPETITION

The Broadcast Education Association (BEA), the largest media academic organization in the world, hosts its annual Student Clubs Film 168 Student Film Competition to feature the best of the best. In 2020, Malone students, under the team name Open Frame Film Lab, ranked #3 for their film submission "Naked Bonds."

This year's competition was formatted as a 168-hour (seven day) film festival. The teams were assigned the genre of comedy and were provided with "production constants" that were required to appear in each #BEAfilm168. Malone's student team, ranked nationally alongside others from Mississippi State and Texas A&M. Team members included Jacob Garwood '21, Connor Jones '23, Graham Kondak '23, Christian Sanko '20, Skyler Shannon '24, Makayla Smith '21, Myriah Smith '23, and Aubrey Younger '24.

MALONE BSN GRADUATING CLASS PASSES NCLEX EXAM AT 90% RATE

Consistent with the last three years, members of the 2020 Bachelor of Science in Nursing (BSN) graduating class have passed the National Council Licensure Examination (NCLEX-RN) on their first attempt, achieving a 90% pass rate. According to the National Council of State Boards of Nursing, the most current national average pass rate is 89%.

"We are so proud of our graduates," said Deb Lee '00, dean of the School of Nursing & Health Sciences. "This is an awesome time to be teaching, mentoring, and walking alongside nursing students at Malone while we watch our legacy of academic excellence continue to grow. I am thankful for the contributions made by the Malone community to support our students' transformation in becoming the best nurses they can be for Christ's Kingdom."

Fundraising UPDATE

The Malone Fund sets another record for annual giving

“It's heartening to see members of the Malone family continue to step forward in support of the student experience offered here.”

Due to the generosity of Malone University alumni and friends, a new record for attainment was established for The Malone Fund, the Institution's annual giving program. A total of $1,090,000 was raised, the highest attainment in the history of the Institution, and approximately $60,000 more than last year's record amount.

“It is heartening to see members of the Malone family continue to step forward in support of the student experience offered here,” said Malone President David King. “Annual giving dollars provide essential resources for course instruction as well as financial aid to help families afford the cost of a Malone education. Members of the Board of Trustees have been leaders in the growth of the Malone Fund with their remarkable giving. We're blessed to have this group of ambassadors working on behalf of the University.”

Overall giving to the University also increased substantially, raising $2.5 million compared to $2 million in the previous fiscal year.

MALONE PROGRAMS RANK AMONG THE BEST IN 2021

Malone's online Degree Completion Program was recognized by College Consensus, a college review aggregator that considers institutions across the country for their focus on and investment in online learning services for adults interested in returning to college. College Consensus chose 50 schools from a survey that exemplified changes necessary for students today. To be selected, certain requirements were to be met, including cost, reputation, and return on investment (ROI).

Malone's online graduate program in Clinical Mental Health Counseling was recently recognized as one of the Best Online Counseling Degree Programs by intelligent.com. 1,200 accredited colleges and universities were assessed and rankings were based on course offerings, cost, flexibility, and reputation in the field.
